

Strengthening Chicago's Nonprofit Community

The Young Nonprofit Professionals Network of Chicago (YNPN Chicago) was founded by a few local nonprofit professionals in 2001 to address the challenges faced by the young people (generally in their 20s and 30s) who make up a substantial segment of the Chicago area's nonprofit workforce. These challenges include lower compensation, limited resources and emotional struggles of the work. YNPN Chicago seeks to offset some of the challenges inherent to this sector by providing members with free or low-cost access to professional development activities, social events, and networking and career tools designed to enhance their own individual work while strengthening Chicago's nonprofit community as a whole. One of YNPN Chicago's primary commitments is to provide accessible, quality professional development, service and social events. From workshops and career fairs to volunteer outings and social activities, events are designed to attract talented and motivated professionals to the nonprofit sector and to ensure these professionals have the resources they need as they prepare for advancing leadership.
