

Suki McClatchey Director, Global Citizenship

Suki McClatchey, director, Global Citizenship for Abbott. She is responsible for managing and developing programs with not-for-profit organizations that address global needs in the area of access to health care. She also oversees the company's disaster relief efforts and product donations programs.

Before assuming her current position in 2006, McClatchey served at Abbott as the manager of Abbott's Prevention of Mother-to-Child-Transmission of HIV/AIDS donations program. Prior to this, she conducted pharmaceutical and nutritional market research in Abbott's international pharmaceutical division. McClatchey joined Abbott after spending three years with the World Health Organization (WHO) in Geneva, Switzerland. During her time at the WHO, her primary responsibility was to research and report on the global impact of micronutrient malnutrition on the health and well being of vulnerable populations.

McClatchey received her master's in public health with a focus on international maternal and child health from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.
