

Cameron Johnson

Cam Johnson is a Director of Advancement at the University of Illinois at Chicago. He currently manages the fundraising and alumni relations initiatives of UIC's College of Urban Planning and Public Affairs. With over 12 years of experience helping achieve the philanthropic dreams of both donors and institutions in the education and healthcare sectors, Cam is energized by new challenges and applying new strategies in harmony with best practices.

In addition to his Board duties with AFP Chicago, Cam serves on the Philanthropy Committee. He holds a B.A. degree in Politics and Government from North Park University, a certificate in Philanthropy and Nonprofit Organizations from Northwestern University, and a Certified Fund Raising Executive (CFRE) designation. Cam lives in Wilmette with his wife, Linnea, and three children.