

Kadee Tseitlin

Kadee Tseitlin joined The Nature Conservancy in 2003. She is currently a Prospect Development Analyst focused on prospect research to help feed the pipeline. Kadee's prior roles for the Conservancy have included, Associate Director of Philanthropy where she focused on major gifts fundraising; Donor Relations Manager where she focused on annual fundraising; and Operations Manager where she managed human resources, contracts administration, and office management.

Before working for the Conservancy, she was the Program Manager for DePaul University's Chaddick Institute for Metropolitan Development. Kadee and her husband, Bobby, have two sons and live in Chicago. She is a graduate of DePaul University with a B.A. in Geography and a minor in Political Science.